Señor Presidente,

I would like to bring to your kind attention my concerns regarding the serious risks to the life, safety, and security of the members of the Inter-Church Commission for Justice and Peace. On 1 December, they reported several incidents where its members were at risk of losing their lives or being severely injured by the action of unknown people. Their account includes the sighting of an armed unknown man who pointed a firearm against the only member of the organization's protection detail in Southwest Colombia in November 27 and the chase of one of the organization's security vehicles with three human rights defenders on board by a group of heavily armed men, who also pointed their guns at and tried to stop them on the road in November 30.

In recent months J & P has reached out to the National Protection Unit, asking for the strengthening of protections. They have defended human rights for nearly three decades. Working in several regions of the country, mainly Chocó, Cauca, Valle del Cauca, Meta, Putumayo and Antioquia, most of them among those affected the most by armed conflict, inequality, discrimination and other systemic issues, they have supported individuals, families and communities in their calls for the respect and fulfilment of their civil, political, economic, cultural and environmental rights. Defending human rights in Colombia is a high-risk endeavour.

The Inter-Church Commission for Peace and Justice's history is a testament to it. Because of their work, they have been subject to threats and attacks both by State and non-State actors. The organization has documented all these events and demanded protection by the authorities and received precautionary measures via the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights. Despite this and a recent request for the strengthening of the security measures provided by the National Protection Unit, the J & P has reported several failures in the vehicles assigned to them and delays in their maintenance and the general weakening of the protection measures. They work in some of the most marginalized regions. Not having guarantees for their safety not only negatively impact on the exercise of their right to defend human rights but also on people and communities who benefit from engaging with them. It is also part of a wider trend of closure of the space to defend human rights in the country that needs to be urgently addressed by a government who vowed to protect human rights defenders.

I urge you to take immediate action and provide the Inter-Church Commission for Peace and Justice with effective and stronger protection measures that allow them to continue defending human rights. These actions must include, provided their feedback and consent, a further evaluation the risks faced by the organization and its members and the reinforcement of the security details provided to them.

Looking forward to your answer, I remain

Yours truly,
